

This is Jah'le Thrash and his supervisor Judy Ramirez. He was our Spartan Search intern for the semester. Today is his last day with us and then there will be another intern next semester

Judy had this to say about him:
"Jah'le was very helpful in the BMPS building. He came to work everyday with a positive attitude and help to keep the building safe and healthy. Jah'le was a pleasure to work with and we wish him well in his next rotation!"

Spartan Project Search

Spartan Project SEARCH's inaugural year started in Fall 2016 at Michigan State University as a partnership with Ingham Intermediate School District, Michigan Department of Health and Human Services, Michigan Rehabilitation Services, Community Mental Health, and Peckham Inc. Spartan Project SEARCH brings a successful international program for young adults with developmental disabilities to the campus of Michigan State University, one of 12 program sites starting in Michigan. This Secondary Transition program combines classroom time provided by Ingham Intermediate School District with a year-long unpaid internship at Michigan State University. Participants gain experience in a variety of settings that will align to their interests, abilities and availability.
